ANSWER

Defendant, by his undersigned attorneys, answers Plaintiffs' Amended Complaint of January 19, 2005, as follows:

First Defense

The Complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

Second Defense

Plaintiffs lack standing to challenge the Child Online Protection Act ("COPA" or "Act"), 47 U.S.C. § 231, on constitutional grounds because they are not "engaged in the business" of communicating materials that are "harmful to minors" as defined by the Act, and therefore do not fall under the Act's ambit.

Third Defense

Defendant, in response to the numbered subparagraphs of the Complaint, answers as follows:

1. The first four sentences of this paragraph are a characterization of Plaintiffs' lawsuit and contain legal conclusions to which no response is required. To the extent a response is deemed required, Defendant denies these allegations. Insofar as these sentences quote from the Act, no response is required and the Defendant respectfully refers the Court to the Act, 47 U.S.C. § 231, for a full and accurate statement of its contents. The fifth and sixth sentences of this paragraph present a description of the procedural history of this case, to which no response is required. To the extent a response is deemed required, Defendant denies the allegations except to admit that this court granted a preliminary injunction against the Act in February 1999.

Defendant denies that in June 2004 the Supreme Court affirmed this Court's February 1999 ruling; defendant avers that the Supreme Court's June 2004 ruling affirmed the prior judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. The last sentence of this paragraph is a characterization of Plaintiffs' lawsuit to which no response is required. To the extent a response is deemed required, Defendant admits the allegations in this sentence.

2. The first sentence of this paragraph contains a legal conclusion to which no response is required. To the extent a response is deemed required, Defendant lacks sufficient knowledge or information to form a belief as to the truth of these allegations, except to admit that the Plaintiffs are speakers, content providers and users of the Web. Defendant admits the second sentence of this paragraph. The remainder of this paragraph is a characterization of Plaintiffs' lawsuit and contains legal conclusions to which no response is required. Defendant denies the allegations in the first two sentences of this paragraph, except to admit the following: that at the time it passed COPA, Congress established the Commission on Online Child Protection ("COPA Commision") to evaluate methods to help reduce access by minors to material that is harmful to minors on the Internet; that the COPA Commission's report was issued on October 20, 2000; and that the Computer Science and Telecommunications Board of the National Research Council ("NRC") published a separate report entitled "Youth, Pornography, and the Internet" in 2002. To the extent that the allegations in the first two sentences of this paragraph seek to describe the conclusions of the COPA Commission's and the NRC's reports, the allegations are characterizations of documents which speak for themselves, to which no further response is required. To the extent that a further response is deemed required, Defendant denies the allegations. The allegation in the third sentence of this paragraph is a legal conclusion to which no response is required. To the extent that a response is deemed required, Defendant denies this allegation.

7. The allegations contained in this paragraph are legal conclusions to which no response is required. To the extent a response is deemed required, Defendant denies the
